

New Ideas

The physical body is most nearly attired to the earth from which it gets its substance of any part of the individual. The earth produces the food which is taken into the stomach and by a series of minuts and wonderful processes changed to a fluid which nourishes and sustains the whole body. Recent scientific experiments have proven that the brain does not as we was hitherto supposed either generate or retain thought. On the contrary the nervous system which extends through out the entire physical body is the recipient as well as the generators of thought. Separate and apart from the nervous system both body and brain are insensate and insensible organs, incapable of sensing injury or inflicting it.

Man is a physical, a mental and a spiritual being. Each and every part of his fold nature seeming to develop out of or springing from the one below it, in the order named.

Previous to the present century so called physical science declared man to be a composite of mind and matter.

The word matter in this sense being as "dead stuff." The body was then designed as "dead stuff" and the mind being the opposite was considered as "live stuff." At this time the mind, presumably, was located in the brain or in some portion of it.

Now the brain while it is one single organ to all intents and proposes is strictly speaking, composed of three separate and distinct parts or lobes; none of which are marked by a special activity or vibratory movement of their own such as distinguishes the heart, lungs, etc. While the rhythmic pulsation of the blood through this organ is the same as it is in the other organs of the body with dissimilar functions. The brain itself is an inert lump of matter, remembering that in accordance with science we must define the word matter as "dead stuff". But here the scientist contradicts himself or rather his definition of the word matter; for he goes on to state that "thought fluid" is generated in or by the action of the gray matter of the brain. This statement is absurd upon the very face of it, at no time and under no circumstances any where throughout all nature does the law of generation or regeneration act in what is termed matter. "dead stuff".

The rhythmic beat of nature's pulsing heart has ever been and must continued ever to be the accompaniment of the outward manifestation of the creative act. The life principal, the first cause, the electric spark, the the creative force, call it by any name you please, must and does underly all created things.

The physical body of man the organs within this body and his brain are one and all, composed of precisely the same material. The only difference being in the finess or grade of the material and not in the material itself. and modern science has mathamatically demonstrated this statement, there is in all this world no single atom of what was previously termed matter. On the contrary, even that which has the appearance of being as dead as a door nail or deader has hidden away in the innermost depths of its being the electric spark of life; the possibility of growth and development. Even the rocks those apparently lifeless and inert things increase in size and change their shape from century to century, as is proven by careful observation and actual measurement.

CIRCUS AGAIN PARADES.

Barnum and Bailey to Present New Street Spectacle in El Paso.

Those who visit the Barnum and Bailey Greatest Shows on Earth in El Paso, on Saturday, October 3, will have an opportunity of seeing the greatest parade that ever was presented by a circus, the management having again established the parade feature a part of the days exhibitions.

During the four years that this circus has omitted the morning pageant an army of artists and mechanics have been working day and night in the foreign workshops of the circus at Stock of Trent, England, originating and building this years spectacle. Floats of burnished gold, howdah draperies and throne rugs from Persia, silken banners, scarfs and flags from the looms of China, statuary from Italian studios, costumes from Paris and harness mounted in silver give to the parade a brilliancy that is dazzling.

The entire world has contributed to this pageant. Every phase of human existence is presented; 1,500 men, women and children take part in it and 700 horses are employed. It cost ten times more money than any parade of the past and is three times as long.

It will be given at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

This year's company of performers is the greatest aggregation of talent that has ever gathered together. It comes from all parts of the world and the acts presented display great novelty, and are so varied in character as to satisfy all tastes. Some of the most noteworthy acts are those of the La Raque sisters of France, who are exploiting a most daring, heart-thrilling and dangerous double automobile somersault act called "Autos that Pass in the Air"; Robert Dohn, from the Black Forest of Germany, who lifts an automobile and passengers with his teeth; the Fredianis of France, who do difficult acrobatic feats while standing on running horses; Prof. Wormwood of England and his trained ant-eaters; the wonderful Viennese troupe of aerialists from France; the Pacheco family of acrobats from Italy, and Le Clown Moustier and his celebrated animal comedians from France.

In all the history of the circus business this year's entertainment given by the Barnum and Bailey circus stands out as the most wonderful performance ever given under canvass.

A special train leaves Roy at 6.05 p. m. on October 2nd and the fare is ten dollars for the round trip, via the El Paso and Southwestern R. R.
